1 What do I want to learn or understand better?

This week I worked with a group on making some implemented commands read and write to the database. I had a bit of a hard time understanding syntax for database communication. I will probably do something concerning the database next week as well, and that would be a good opportunity to gather more understanding. How I would do that I think I will decide on Monday when groups have been assigned (I have realized that I learn differently with different groups and tasks).

2 How can I help someone else, or the entire team, to learn something new?

This week my group was a little out of tune. Personally I felt like I didn't entirely understand the feature we were modifying to communicate with the database. And I feel like the others were probably a little confused as well. So for next week, for both my own understanding and my partner/groups, I will ask if we can break down the user story in written text.

3 What is my contribution towards the team's use of Scrum?

We've continued to update the Scrum board. We are all actively using the board and participating in the scrum process and I think that is just as it should be.

4 What is my contribution towards the team's deliveries?

This week I didn't contribute as much as I would have wanted to. The group was aware of this beforehand, as we were two people who were completely new to databases, and one person who has taken the database course. I still would have wanted to do more. If I'm in a similar situation next week, I will make sure to break down the user story with the help of the group/partner, to make it easier for both of us to work independently.
